

VICTIMS OF THE JANE GRAY DISASTER.
SEVEN BODIES FOUND BY INDIANS ON THE BRITISH COLUMBIA COAST.

Victoria, B. C., June 7.—A dispatch from Atherton says that the bodies of seven white men, supposed to have been victims of the Jane Gray disaster, have been picked up on the beach near the Kuyuquot Reservation by Indians, while a sack of clothing, with an Italian name on it, was washed ashore not far from Kuyuquot. Coupled with this information comes the news by the return of the steamer Willapa that considerable wreckage from the lost schooner, including four of the boats, had been discovered at different points along the coast.

The gasoline launch belonging to Major Ingram's mountain-climbing party had been found by Indians, who had upright, though the seat had been cut off. There were numbers of books and papers in the boat, but no bodies, and the natural supposition is that the six persons who were seen in the boat when it left the schooner had gone over to the Kuyuquot. Some Indians picked up another boat, the dory belonging to the Jane Gray, which was referred to by several of the Indians in their stories of the wreck.
